

David Woodall

In 1969 I left Wakefield School of Art to work as an illustrator with a Greeting Cards Company in Bradford where I also enjoyed doing their advertising. In the mid 1970's I arrived in London and spent the next forty years working as an art director mainly at Saatchi & Saatchi and J Walter Thompson where I was made Head of Art.

In 2005 I was given a two month sabbatical from JWT to attend a Slade Summer School which was one of the best things I've ever done. In 2010 I retired from advertising to become a full time painter. He has since exhibited in The Royal Academy Summer Show, The Ruth Borchard Self Portrait Awards, The National Open Arts Competition and The Surrey Artists competition at The Lightbox Gallery. He paints Figurative, Landscape and Still life always trying to find a refreshing way to look at everyday things. He hopes to spend the next forty years painting.
